MOLLY GIVEN

Prohibition Taproom
If you can't make it down to the beach this weekend for the Fourth of July, don't sweat it. Prohibition Taproom will be spending the holiday throwing an all-day block party featuring boozy sorbet specials, a Dunk-a-Trump dunk tank, giant Jenga and Connect 4, Miller High Life pony bottle specials, access to their full menu at the restaurant and their enticing cider and beer list, plus much more. Entry to the block party is $25 and includes all-you-can-eat BBQ (hotdogs, hamburgers and more summer staples) and a Prohibition Taproom tank top. The fun starts at 1 p.m. and will party on until 10 p.m. 501 N. 13th St., prohibitiontaproom.com

Delaware River Waterfront
There truly is nowhere better to spend the Fourth of July than right by the water, making the Delaware River Waterfront the perfect destination for your whole family. The waterfront will be celebrating the patriotic occasion over the course of four days, and the festivities will include concerts, two fireworks shows, activities for the kiddos, outdoor movies, pop-up markets and much more. The full list of events is listed on the official website. While enjoying all of the holiday activities, be sure to check out Summerfest for some rollerblading, carnival games and boardwalk bites; and Spruce Street Harbor Park for a unique atmosphere and plenty of summertime treats and refreshments. Penn's Landing, delawareriverwaterfront.com

Head to the Adventure Aquarium in Camden this Thursday to partake in their 9th annual Independence Day Splash. The aquarium is extending their hours on the Fourth and will remain open until 9 p.m. with plenty of upbeat and family-friendly activities on the agenda. Kiddos can also enjoy the Stingray Beach Club Feed (5:45 p.m.), Hippo Feed (6:30 p.m.), Octopus Feed (6:45 p.m.), or the Up Close Animal Experience (7:30 p.m.) as well. After enjoying all the activities, be sure to check out the fireworks over the waterfront from either the aquarium's cafe, rotunda or at Hippo Fest Central. Ticket prices for the museum vary by age. 1 Riverside Dr., Camden, NJ, adventureaquarium.com

Philadelphians can spend the day at this refreshing oasis by lounging in one of their poolside lounges, or by taking a dip in their 30,000-gallon heated saltwater pool as the live DJ sets the musical ambiance. Guests can also look into reserving a private cabana, daybed and/or a plunge pool to truly make their experience one of a kind. Vesper Dayclub also offers enticing menu options, signature cocktails and premium VIP bottle service. Doors open at 11 a.m.; you must be 21+ to enter. 1031 Germantown Ave., vesperdayclub.com

The new pop-up is an outdoor oasis for any wine lover and will offer the perfect backdrop for the red, white and blue holiday. The menu offers a massive variety of wines by the glass and bottle, cans of beer, cider, and rosé, seasonal and wine-inspired cocktails, house-made strawberry rosé wine pops and enticing light bites. Freebyrd's Carolina Classic Chicken Sandwich. PUNCH MEDIA

A little bit of chicken, fried

National Fried Chicken Day is this Saturday, July 6.
MOLLY GIVEN

This weekend is full of summertime happenings — soaking up the sun, celebrating the Fourth and plenty of delicious BBQs. Here's another exciting event to add to your already fun agenda: National Fried Chicken Day. The City of Brotherly Love is pulling out all the stops for this mouthwatering extravaganza, and Philadelphians are truly in for a treat.

Freebyrd Chicken
Head to The Bourse Food Hall in Old City for a chance to give back while also indulging in some incredible fried chicken. Freebyrd will be donating 10 percent from every purchase to Philabundance, the local nonprofit aiming to help end hunger. Philadelphians can enjoy tasty fried chicken options including The Freebyrd Chicken Sandwich ($9, made with buttermilk-brined fried chicken, Alabama white BBQ sauce and homemade pickles); the Carolina Classic Chicken Sandwich ($10, made with buttermilk-brined fried chicken, Duke's mayo, lettuce and tomato); and the Appalachian Moonshine BBQ Chicken Sandwich ($10, made with buttermilk-brined fried chicken, moonshine BBQ sauce, bacon, homemade pickets and coleslaw) all day this Saturday.
111 S. Independence Mall E., theboursephilly.com

The Twisted Tail
This Southern-style eatery knows how to fry up some amazing chicken. Any Philadelphian looking to celebrate National Fried Chicken Day can head to The Twisted Tail for either brunch or dinner to truly get their fix. For brunch, indulge in their chicken and sweet potato waffles ($16) made with fried chicken and apple butter, and topped with powdered sugar and maple syrup. For dinner, be sure to try their signature fried chicken ($19) with rosemary honey and pickled okra.
509 S. 2nd St., thetwistedtail.com

SouthGate
SouthGate is taking National Fried Chicken Day up a notch with their Seoul Hot Korean Fried Chicken sandwich. This delectable creation features a zesty sauce blend of gochugaru, sesame oil and other secret ingredients and is topped with pickled daikon carrot, perilla leaves, kewpie mayo and served on a toasted brioche bun. Did we mention it's fried twice? So you know it's real. As a bonus, the tasty creation is available for only $7 during happy hour and $15 from the regular menu.
1801 Lombard St., southgatephilly.com

Milkboy
Head to Milkboy's Chestnut Street and South Street locations this weekend to take your tastebuds on a ride for National Fried Chicken Day. Both locations' fried chicken sandwiches ($12) are light and crispy but offer different enticing topping options. Chestnut Street offers a sandwich topped with whole-grain cactus mustard and bacon, and on South Street, they top theirs with bread and butter pickles, whole-grain cactus mustard and slaw.

CO-OP

'Realists win because they always bet on failure' DANIEL HABIF

One of the most popular motivational speakers in the world chatted with Metro. LUZ LANCHEROS

In a world where we have imposed almost a dictatorship over happiness, it has become an empty word often loaded with ignorance, privilege and denial of the complexities of reality. But Daniel Habif has managed to make millions of people — 3.8 million followers on Instagram, including Barack Obama, and half a million on YouTube — follow his advice. With his "Unbreakable" tour, he wants to show people that positivism goes beyond being a cliche phrase on Instagram. And that it is a reality that changes lives! Metro spoke with Habif to learn more.

What is being "unbreakable" about?
It is about having the ability to never give up, but to give oneself a truce. Having the ability to get up despite the weight you have on top. It is about knowing a lot, but doing more. It is about being afraid, but not scared. It is hooking the harpoon of anger, of revenge. It is thinking more about good than evil. It is to be faithful, disciplined. About being focused. It is a cluster of virtues already possessed by human beings. Sometimes we forget about them, because we think they have no value in a society.

Positivism is now sold everywhere. What does it really mean to be positive?
It goes beyond being in a "club of positive absurdities" that seek to deny reality. Although there are those who invite you to that club, to a fantasy world, I am not someone who denies pain. Denying pain is denying humanity. On the contrary, I seek to teach how to use that pain in your favor. Now, positivism shows you and teaches you that it is useless to beat someone else if you do not beat yourself.

Positivism matters. Words matter. Linguistics matters. It matters what you say, it matters what you think. It matters how and for what you think. Positivism is necessary for the balance of the world's energy charge. The negative energy is always present. It is more attractive, because it is easier to go by the "inertia of the bad" than to go for the confrontational of the good. The serious problem we have is that the good has many enthusiasts. Enthusiasts, but not professionals. And the bad is the opposite: it has few enthusiasts, but many professionals.

Why do you think it is so hard to believe in something?
I think it's very easy to believe; the hard part is in what to believe. The eternal freedom of the human being is between deciding and choosing. Many want to believe but not all are willing to pay the price. In fact, today it is very difficult to say in what you believe. If you realize, nobody wants to take responsibility for their convictions. Nobody wants to pay the price of the trial, of the sentence.

Confrontation is sometimes confused with violence. What is the difference between those two things? How do you separate them?
Violence is based on pride, on foolishness. Violence is born of weakness, not firmness. The confrontation is born of firmness.

How do you confront someone but avoid being destroyed in the process?
There's a paradigm: sometimes you need war to bring peace. It is the deep dichotomy of the human being. It is not a matter of semantics, but of accommodation. It is a theme that peace takes a lot of pain. But it is a thing that is worth dreaming about.

Writer-director Ari Aster on horror masterpiece 'Midsommar'

The summer-vacation-gone-horribly-wrong film opens in theaters today. PAT KING

The films made by visionary director Ari Aster create worlds that you feel like you should leave as soon as possible but seem compelled to stay in. His first release, "Hereditary," dealt with how one family navigates grief and trauma and how it can cause irreparable rifts after a death in the family. Well, that is a watered-down way of explaining it. The horror film twisted like a knotted tree and provided some of the most unexpected supernatural scares, and burrowed deep into your core with supreme attention to detail that required multiple viewings to fully comprehend. His newest film, "Midsommar," which opens in theaters today, is a continuation of his unique way of approaching anguish and loss and is the filmmaker's best work to date and destined to become a masterpiece of the horror genre.

The film stars actress Florence Pugh as Dani, who is in a toxic and codependent relationship with fellow graduate student Kristian, played by Jack Reynor. The couple could have gone their separate ways long ago — until Dani is struck with a terrible loss in her family. This just perpetuates things, and Kristian, although begrudgingly, chooses to stick with her and offer his support through the trying time. Kristian and a couple of his fellow friends from school, Josh (William Jackson Harper) and Mark (Will Poulter), take up the offer of their Swedish exchange-student friend Pele (Vilhelm Blomgren) to visit the tightly-knit commune that he grew up in, the Harga, for their annual midsummer festival over summer break.

To the chagrin of the group, Dani decides to tag along. Once they arrive, the group is taken inside the world of the Harga and their paganistic religion and way of living. They are given numerous ancient hallucinogens to become more open to the experience, with the community's charming Nordic outfits and seemingly funny and harmless customs. It's from there that things take a turn for the worse, and the group realizes that the Harga's practices are more dangerous than they would have expected and that they can either assimilate and chalk it up to cultural differences, or leave before their lives are at risk.

Aster viewed making the film as a meditation on codependency, and how we lose a sense of our identity after a traumatic loss or a terrible breakup.

"I'm fascinated by family structures and surrogate families and certain codependent relationships that people find themselves in and that they seek out," Aster explains. "I'm certainly not exempt from that. I do see this film as a film about codependency. Even our main character [Dani] being in one codependent relationship and then she finds herself in, arguably, a more functional one. It's arguable whether or not it's healthier than the first one. It's also kind of about avoiding looking head-on at something that has died because it is too painful to see that it's dead. I think one reason that it is so painful to see that a relationship has ended is because we are all afraid of dying alone and being alone and facing these existential questions that don't necessarily have an answer. There's this low hum that we spend our lives walking out or covering over and will do anything to avoid being alone long enough to have to confront these things."

Aster created the religion, language and terrifying practices of the community after months of immersive research on Swedish tradition, folklore and mythology. Through that work, the Harga feels like an existing historic culture and some of their horrific traditions seem like irredeemable actions other religions would have made excuses for in the past.

"It was very important to me that this would be a place that felt lived in and felt like it had a very rich history and deep traditions," says Aster. "But at the same time, I wanted this place to also kind of function as a fulfillment of all of Dani's needs, which are being denied throughout the film. In a big way, I really see this community as almost being a manifestation of Dani's will. In that sense, the film is really a fairy tale even more than a horror film about indoctrination. Because there is an indoctrination that happens, but it's all kind of contributing to this wish-fulfillment fantasy that is playing out."

Aster has described this film as a breakup movie inside a horror film. And as Dani and Kristian's relationship starts falling apart amidst the chaos around them, they are both left with grappling with their identity and personal fulfillment. But since this is a horror film at its core, without any spoilers, let's just say that things do not end peacefully.

"It was important to me that people would relate to both sides of this," Aster says of the film's two stars. "We're aligned with Dani so for all intents and purposes, Kristian is the antagonist. I know I've certainly been on both sides of that dynamic."

"Midsommar" opens in theaters today.

Overcoming heartbreak and healing after a breakup

PHIIRST

ASK PHIIRST:

Whether you're partnered or single, investing in your mental health doesn't have to be a solo journey. No one knows this better than the Philadelphia Institute for Individual, Relational & Sex Therapy (PhIIRST). At the end of the day, it's all about braving life's challenges so that you can be your best self.

Research shows that the brain reacts similarly to physical pain as it does to heartbreak. Translation: Ending a relationship often hurts. We all know that breaking up is hard to do, but it's more than possible to come out the other side stronger and more sure of who you are. Metro spent time with PhIIRST's Rebecca Bassman, MFT, to unpack how to heal after a breakup.

Is it normal to feel really torn up after a breakup?

Absolutely. Individuals are often hung up on their own ideas about how they're supposed to feel when something like this happens. The truth is that breakups bring up lots of different feelings for people, and those feelings can dictate what behaviors come next. Sometimes people think the easiest way to get over a breakup is to jump head first into online dating or another relationship. That may seem like a great distraction, but it's usually only a matter of time before you start hurting again.

Why is it not always a good idea to jump right into a new relationship?

When individuals go right from a painful break up into a new relationship, this often creates more of a "Band-Aid effect" for the original wound instead of genuine healing. The original upset seems to inevitably resurface when something crappy happens in the new relationship. If this cycle is repeated unchecked and unexplored, it can bottle up and become quite painful. There is importance to the sulking process; in having a space for yourself to read, or go back to that yoga class you began neglecting in the early stages of your relationship. It's about remembering what it was, and still is, that gives you your self-joy without relying on another person.

Any tips for healing after a breakup?

It's really important to allow yourself to accept help and lean on your support system, which is something not enough people feel comfortable doing. Asking for the space that you need is also valuable. Something else I've noticed, particularly among people under the age of 25, is that many feel like they're going to be judged for being so affected by a breakup so young. Having a therapist to talk to can be really helpful. They can listen and hear your pain without bias, and offer the support you will need when you are hurting so badly.

How can PhIIRST help?

Phiirst provides an outlet and helps people gain insights to use as they live their life. After a breakup, individuals tend to question their worth and their ability to communicate effectively with others. For many, connecting with a therapist is a reminder that you're capable of building a positive alliance, which alone can boost confidence during vulnerable times.

PhIIRST helps individuals and couples navigate complicated breakups without judgment. They have locations in Center City and Media, Pennsylvania. PhIIRST's team of experts is dedicated to helping you work through it all and live your best life. Visit www.phiirst.com to learn more.

House panel sues Treasury, IRS over Trump's tax returns

Democrats want a look at the president's records from 2013 to 2018.

A House of Representatives panel on Tuesday filed a long-awaited lawsuit in federal court to demand President Donald Trump's individual and business tax returns.

The House Ways and Means Committee filed the lawsuit against the U.S. Treasury Department and Internal Revenue Service after Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin refused a legal request for the records and defied two congressional subpoenas seeking the returns.

The filing sounded the starting gun in what is widely expected to be a lengthy legal battle that is likely to end in the Supreme Court.

There was no official comment from the Trump administration, but Trump attorney Jay Sekulow said: "We will respond to this latest effort at presidential harassment in court."

Democrats want Trump's tax records from 2013 to 2018, which legal experts have said could shed light on the president's business dealings. Such a legal process, experts said, could unfold slowly and become an issue in the 2020 election.

Mnuchin refused to hand over the returns after House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Richard Neal asked for the documents on April 3, under a federal law that says Treasury "shall furnish" such records upon request. The committee believes it is the first time an administration has denied such a request, the lawsuit said.

"In refusing to comply with the statute, defendants have mounted an extraordinary attack on the authority of Congress to obtain information needed to conduct oversight of Treasury, the IRS, and the tax laws on behalf of the American people," the lawsuit said.

> "The Democrats' partisan, flawed lawsuit continues their unprecedented and illegitimate pursuit to expose President Trump's private tax information."
> Rep. Kevin Brady

Neal said in a statement that the panel was now pursuing the matter in court because of the administration's "noncompliance."

"The judiciary has been a bulwark against Trump's steaming corruption and roughshod lawlessness. I have no doubt our lower courts will side with Congress," Rep. Bill Pascrell, a Ways and Means Democrat who has helped lead the campaign to obtain Trump's returns, wrote on Twitter.

Democrats who wanted Neal to move to court more quickly expressed relief at the filing. "This long-overdue legal action is needed to keep this bad president from setting a bad precedent," Rep. Lloyd Doggett said in a statement.

Congressional Republicans condemned the effort as a dangerous political fishing expedition by Democrats that could "weaponize" confidential taxpayer information.

"The Democrats' partisan, flawed lawsuit continues their unprecedented and illegitimate pursuit to expose President Trump's private tax information," Rep. Kevin Brady, the top Republican on Neal's committee, said in a statement.

Ways and Means is one of half a dozen panels in the lower house that are conducting investigations involving Trump and his administration, from his campaign's contacts with Russians during the 2016 presidential race to the sprawling business interests he has not divested since taking office.

The White House is refusing to cooperate with most of them, setting up other expected legal battles. REUTERS

White House says Trump's July Fourth will be patriotic, not political

White House officials on Tuesday said President Trump will avoid politics and stick to patriotic themes in a high-profile July Fourth speech in front of the Lincoln Memorial amid questions about the cost and tone of the celebration.

U.S. battle tanks were spotted on a cargo train in Washington on Tuesday morning, a sign of the military firepower that will be featured as part of a July Fourth celebration that will differ significantly from past events.

For decades, presidents have kept a low profile during Washington's annual celebration of the 1776 Declaration of Independence, which typically draws hundreds of thousands of people to Washington's monument-lined National Mall for a nonpartisan concert and fireworks.

This year, Trump plans to speak at a military "Salute to America" that will feature military bands and flyovers from the U.S. Navy's Blue Angels and Air Force One, the modified Boeing 747 that transports presidents.

The event could also feature M1 Abrams battle tanks, a B-2 bomber, F-35 and F-22 fighter jets, and the Marine One helicopter that transports the president, the Pentagon said. Air traffic at nearby Ronald Reagan National Airport will be suspended during the flyovers and the fireworks, according to the FAA.

Democrats in Congress have questioned whether Trump will turn a nonpartisan patriotic celebration into a taxpayer-funded campaign rally.

"That's absolutely ridiculous. This is all about a salute to America. The president is not going to get political," White House spokesman Hogan Gidley said on Fox Business Network on Tuesday.

The administration to date has not said how much Trump's pumped-up July Fourth celebration will cost. The Pentagon postponed a military parade planned for last November after it estimated it could cost $90 million.

"It is unacceptable that the Interior Department is failing to inform Congress about how it plans to spend taxpayer money to fund the president's lavish July Fourth plans, which reportedly include special access to the National Mall for the politically connected," Democratic Sen. Tom Udall said in a statement.

A VIP section set up near the Lincoln Memorial will be open to government officials and lawmakers, according to a White House official speaking on condition of anonymity. In previous years, government officials and other VIPs have watched the fireworks from the White House lawn. REUTERS

Trump administration retreats on census citizenship question

Ballots without a citizenship question are now being printed.

In a stinging defeat for President Donald Trump, his administration ended its effort to add a citizenship question to the 2020 U.S. census, saying that it will begin printing forms that do not include the contentious query.

White House and Justice Department officials confirmed the decision, which came in the aftermath of a Supreme Court ruling on June 27 that faulted the administration for its original attempt to add the question.

"I respect the Supreme Court but strongly disagree with its ruling regarding my decision to reinstate a citizenship question on the 2020 census," Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross said in a statement.

A protester holds a sign outside the U.S. Supreme Court in Washington. REUTERS

"The Census Bureau has started the process of printing the decennial questionnaires without the question. My focus, and that of the bureau and the entire department, is to conduct a complete and accurate census," Ross said.

Although the Supreme Court left open the possibility of the administration adding the question, there was little time left for the government to come up with a new rationale.

The government had said in court filings that it needed to finalize the details of the questionnaire by the end of June.

After the ruling, Trump tweeted that he was consulting lawyers about delaying the census so that the question could be added.

Critics have called the citizenship question a Republican ploy to scare immigrants into not taking part in the population count and engineer an undercount in Democratic-leaning areas with high immigrant and Latino populations. That would benefit non-Hispanic whites and help Trump's fellow Republicans gain seats in the U.S. House of Representatives and state legislatures, the critics said.

"In light of the Supreme Court's ruling, the Trump administration had no choice but to proceed with printing the 2020 census forms without a citizenship question. Everyone in America counts in the census, and today's decision means we all will," said Dale Ho, a lawyer with the American Civil Liberties Union, which had fought the Trump administration in court. Stop the 'Press'-es: Team USA defeats England, advances to World Cup final Goals from Christen Press and Alex Morgan, and Alyssa Naeher's penalty send the U.S. into Sunday's final.

joseph.pantorno@metro.us

You can't have a much better 30th birthday than the one Alex Morgan just had, but she might want to buy a present for goalkeeper Alyssa Naeher.

The United States continued its trend of rebellious behavior this time of year against England, booking their place in the 2019 FIFA Women's World Cup final with a 2-1 semifinal victory over the Three Lionesses on Tuesday.

Morgan provided the game-winning header in the 31st minute, supporting Christen Press' opener that was equalized by England star striker Ellen White in the first half.

Naeher, however, was the hero in the match's final moments, denying a Steph Houghton penalty with six minutes remaining to punch the United States' ticket to the final.

Her big save was the crescendo of a final 25 minutes that was largely dominated by the English underdogs.

While Naeher played the part of stalwart, it was vital to see another American not named Megan Rapinoe score in the knockout round. The star forward was sidelined by a hamstring injury for the semifinal. She had accounted for all four goals against Spain and France in the knockout round.

Her replacement for the night, Press, helped American supporters quickly forget about Rapinoe's absence, however, putting the U.S. on top in the 10th minute.

A picture-perfect cross from Kelley O'Hara served the ball on a silver platter for the American forward. Press barely had to leave the ground at the far post, cannoning her header into the back of the net.

It was the first time this tournament that England trailed — and they found an answer quickly.

Just nine minutes after Press' opener, White flicked home a cross from Keira Walsh to knot things up at one. It was White's sixth goal of the tournament, putting her in the lead for the golden boot over Morgan and Rapinoe.

That would last only 12 minutes, however.

Morgan put the U.S. in front in the 31st minute when she headed home Lindsey Horan's cross to give the Americans a halftime lead. It was her first goal of the tournament since torching Thailand for five in the group-stage opener.

White looked to reclaim the golden-boot lead in the 68th minute when she got behind the American defense and beat keeper Alyssa Naeher, but she was deemed offside after a video-assisted review.

VAR almost came back to bite the Americans with 10 minutes remaining when it was deemed Becky Sauerbrunn took Ellen White down in the box, making contact with the striker's back leg. However, Naeher stoned Houghton in the 84th minute to preserve the American lead.

The Connecticut native had it all the way, ranging to her right to stop the low, soft shot of Houghton.

Naeher and Co. will now wait for the winner of the other semifinal between Sweden and the Netherlands on Wednesday to see who they'll face in the title match on Sunday morning.

Sweden is one of the United States' largest rivals, the two having already played in the group stage. The U.S. exacted revenge on the Swedes for a 2016 Summer Olympics loss in the quarterfinals, winning 2-0 in the Group F finale last month.

Sports betting 101: NFL Futures

SugarHouse Casino's sportsbook manager dishes out the basics of sports betting.

JIM LLEWELLYN

Jim Llewellyn is the sportsbook manager at SugarHouse Casino.

GETTY IMAGES

Today we'll again jump into the intricacies of the SugarHouse Casino Sportsbook at MetroBet.us/Sugar with a glance at more NFL futures odds. There are dozens of options for football betting here, one of which is NFL Offensive Rookie of the Year.

Eagles rookie running back Miles Sanders has the fifth best odds of taking home the award at +1400, with Arizona Cardinals quarterback Kyler Murray occupying the top spot at +225.

Here are the steps for seeing the odds and placing a bet at MetroBet.us/Sugar:

Step 2: You will see three options in the middle of your screen: "Live & Upcoming," "Futures" and "All Football." Select "Futures."

Step 3: Scroll down past the "Winner of NFL, NFC, AFC" options. Click on January 5, 2020, where you will see "Offensive Rookie of the Year 2019/2020."

If you bet $50 on Sanders to win Offensive Rookie of the Year and he wins the award, you would win $700 with a payout of $750.

Running backs have actually won the award in three of the past four years (Saquon Barkley in 2018, Alvin Kamara in 2017 and Todd Gurley in 2015; QB Dak Prescott won in 2016), so Sanders is definitely an option worth considering.

To bet now, go to MetroBet.us/Sugar and get up to $250 in a first-deposit match bonus by using promo code METROBET.

Phillies vs. Braves game pick

Nick Pivetta (4-2, 5.63 ERA) was originally scheduled to pitch on Tuesday, but Gabe Kapler decided to shift his start to Wednesday, when the Braves will put rookie Bryse Wilson (0-0, 8.31 ERA) on the mound at the hitters haven that is SunTrust Park. Oddsmakers can't set the total high enough, as the Over is 20-7-1 in the Braves' last 28 home games.

Pivetta has been quite generous with his opposition this season, and Atlanta is no exception. In two starts this year, the Canada-born right-hander has pitched to a 6.35 ERA (11 1/3 innings) against the Braves.

To bet on this game now, go to MetroBet.us/Sugar and get a risk-free bet up to $250 by using promo code METROBET.

He'll have to beware of hot-hitting shortstop Dansby Swanson, who has recorded a 1.061 OPS in his last seven games going into the game.

Wilson has struggled for playing time in the majors this year and his performance has justified the multiple demotions. He allowed four runs on six hits in just 4 1/3 innings against the Cubs on June 27. Bryce Harper and company should feast on the North Carolina native.

Sportsbooks across the country are absolutely loving the moves the Sixers made on Sunday night in the re-signing of Tobias Harris and the free agent signing of Al Horford. The Sixers were the only top eight team in the NBA from last season that saw their futures odds improve from last Sunday morning to last Monday morning as they currently have the third best odds at winning the 2020 NBA title at MetroBet.us/Sugar.

Here is a glance at NBA Futures odds with the major chaos of free agency behind us.

Get these Sixers odds at +1100 while you can at MetroBet.us/Sugar as when we get closer to the start of the season we'll likely see them jump to around +800.

You could easily make the case that the Sixers should have better odds than the Bucks, as they now have a Giannis-stopper in Horford (who was excellent on Giannis during his time in Boston). Milwaukee also just lost Malcolm Brogdon to the Pacers in free agency.

Another sneaky good futures pick here is the Utah Jazz at +2000. The Jazz are always a great "betting against the public" pick, and they've quietly made strong moves this offseason including signing the criminally underrated Bojan Bogdanovic and making a trade for the criminally underrated Mike Conley.

The pick: Sixers at +1100, Jazz at +2000

MLB best bets: Orioles at Rays

MetroBet takes a glance at one of the more bet-friendly games on the MLB slate for Wednesday.

Among the few bright spots in another dismal year for the Baltimore Orioles is starter John Means (7-4, 2.50 ERA), who gets the ball for the Birds at Tropicana Field against Yonny Chirinos (7-4, 3.10 ERA) and the Tampa Bay Rays on Wednesday. He should guide them to at least a first five innings victory.

Means has yet to start a game against the Rays this season but worked two shutout innings against them on April 18, striking out four of the seven batters he faced. The West Virginia product can get himself into trouble with high pitch counts, but fortunately for Means, Tampa is one of the least patient teams in baseball. The Rays were 22nd in walks drawn in June and tallied the third-most strikeouts. Means is fresh off a 2-0 June (four starts), where he pitched to a 1.71 ERA.

Chirinos has posted an elevated 4.00 ERA and 1.277 WHIP in his last three starts (0-2 record). He was dealt a loss by the Orioles in their most recent encounter on May 4, surrendering three runs on seven hits in a 3-0 decision.

The play: Orioles moneyline

Sixers notes: Latest on Ben Simmons, Jimmy Butler

The 76ers look to extend the stay of their star point guard.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The Sixers have offered a max deal to Ben Simmons. GETTY IMAGES

NEW SIMMONS DEAL ON THE TABLE

The Philadelphia 76ers took their first step in keeping Ben Simmons in the City of Brotherly Love for the foreseeable future.

ESPN's Adrian Wojnarowski reported on Tuesday that the Sixers have offered the All-Star point guard a five-year, $170 million max contract.

He added that Simmons and his agent, Rich Paul, are "expected to work through the details toward an eventual agreement."

Simmons continued his progression in his second year in the NBA, garnering his first All-Star nod as one of the more enigmatic point guards in the game.

While he averaged 16.9 points and 7.7 assists per game last season, questions about his jump shot remain a concern. It had many speculating if the 76ers were going to offer a max deal this offseason. Simmons has one year left on his deal before becoming a restricted free agent.

SIXERS MADE OFFER TO BUTLER

It seems as though the 76ers made a play for Jimmy Butler after all.

A source informed NBC Sports' Tom Haberstroh that the Sixers offered a five-year, $190 million max contract in an attempt to secure Butler in Philadelphia for the long haul.

It contradicts the report put forth by ESPN's Adrian Wojnarowski and the Athletic's Shams Charania — two fo the NBA's biggest insiders — who noted that the team was not interested in offering a max deal.

With Butler unwilling to want to stay with the Sixers, the organization opted to pull off a sign-and-trade, sending him to the Miami Heat for Josh Richardson.

Richardson provides a younger, more promising shooting guard to replace JJ Redick, who opted to sign with the New Orleans Pelicans.

At 25 years old, Richardson is coming off a career year in which he averaged 16.6 points and 4.1 assists per game.

The returning Tobias Harris will take Butler's spot at the 3 while the newly-acquired Al Horford will take over at the 4 in front of Joel Embiid.
